Icelandic manufacturers offer a range of racks and cabinets, from artisan handmade wood pieces to modular, sustainable steel systems and large-scale interior fittings.

Artisan and Designer Cabinets

AGUSTAV, led by Gustav Johannsson and Agusta Magnusdottir, specializes in handcrafted cabinets using high-quality wood such as oak and walnut. Their designs emphasize timeless Scandinavian techniques, durability, and functionality, with each piece tailored for long-term use in homes. AGUSTAV cabinets are often custom-made, reflecting both traditional craftsmanship and modern design sensibilities, and are showcased at international design fairs and Icelandic events like DesignMarch .

Circular and Modular Systems

FOLK Reykjavik produces modular racks and shelving systems such as the Turnaround racks and Urban Nomad wall shelves, made from recycled steel and FSC-certified wood. These products are designed for sustainability and recyclability, with modular components that allow flexible configurations for homes or offices. Their approach combines Nordic circular design principles with durable materials, suitable for both residential and commercial spaces .

Large-Scale Interior Fittings

Kappar is a major Icelandic manufacturer capable of producing cabinets, tables, doors, and complete interior fittings for apartments, hotels, offices, and public institutions. They offer customized solutions, including fire-resistant doors, glass wall systems, and healthcare-specific fittings (KappLAB). Kappar's production emphasizes high-quality, scalable manufacturing, making them suitable for large projects requiring both cabinets and modular storage systems .

Retail and Modular Storage

For more general modular storage solutions, IKEA Iceland provides a variety of shelves, frames, and cabinets that can be combined in multiple ways to suit different spaces. While not Icelandic in origin, these products are widely available locally and offer affordable, flexible storage options .
